Subject: RE: Third call for information regarding IMPRESS' application for recognition

Dear Susie,

I am unlikely to have much to add to my previous submission, other than to express my surprise that the PRP should risk what is left of its credibility by yet another deadline extension with the seeming aim of doing anything it can to approve IMPRESS, no matter how many flaws the information gathering process exposes.

After two failed bids to consider this application, the very least the PRP should do in advance of a third attempt is to openly state what IMPRESS has failed to demonstrate and what further information is sought.

The PRP should also explain how IMPRESS can be regarded as a credible regulator in Scotland when it has only signed up one minor website.

Yours,

John McLellan

Dear John

I am writing to inform you that the Press Recognition Panel (PRP) has launched a third call for information regarding IMPRESS' application for recognition.

This call for information will last for 20 working days, from 25 August 2016 to 23 September 2016.
Visit our website to take part.

I will write to you again once the call for information has ended.

Kind regards

Susie
