

Hi as a citizen of this country I am very concerned with the right of redress for individuals when their privacy has been invaded and abused by the British press.

As you the Press Recognition Panel (PRP) are due this Autumn, to give your assessment as to whether self-regulators meet Leveson's criteria, in a report to Parliament on the state of the press regulatory system.

I would like to highlight an important point raised by the Leveson's inquiry which I feel is being blatantly ignored to their own end, by the majority of the British Press including but solely, deliberately failing to recognise IMPRESS as the independent self-regulator.

1. Parliament should be reminded by the PRP what the Leveson Report said should happen if the industry tried to veto his recommendations and refused to comply. The Leveson Report says: "if some or all of the industry are not willing to participate in effective independent regulation, my own concluded view is to reject the notion that they should escape regulation altogether. I cannot, and will not, recommend another last chance saloon for the press. With some measure of regret, therefore, I am driven to conclude that the Government should be ready to consider the need for a statutory backstop regulator being established, to ensure, at the least, that the press are subject to regulation that would require the fullest compliance with the criminal and civil law, if not also to ensure consequences equivalent to those that would flow from an independent self-regulatory system."
2. In the meantime, regardless of whether IMPRESS is recognised by the PRP, the PRP should strongly recommend to Parliament that the key 'guaranteed access to justice incentive' (section 40 of the Crime and Courts Act) should be brought into effect as Parliament had intended.

Regards Edward Haddon