

I am dismayed to learn that the recommendations of the Leveson Enquiry may now not be implemented. It is quite clear to me that the Press are incapable or unwilling in the business of self-regulation. The claim that "the freedom of the press" may be an issue is less true than the profitability of the press. I would like to press for a full implementation of Leveson without which many people are going to be victims of the press, as have so many in the past. Many of these people have been at their most vulnerable when their privacy has been disregarded and they have been violated by the press. It is only if we work together for the sake of these victims that we can offer protection to others in future.

Graham Trasler