

Dear PRP.

I am most concerned that the Press will not be held to account in a way that is effective and fulfils what was put forward by Leveson.

The behaviour of the press both tabloid and some broadsheets has been lamentable and has tarnished the name of the media in general. We were promised a robust response in the future to any further transgressions and I would ask you to take on board the following points.

1. Parliament should be reminded by the PRP what the Leveson Report said should happen if the industry tried to veto his recommendations and refused to comply. The Leveson Report says: "if some or all of the industry are not willing to participate in effective independent regulation, my own concluded view is to reject the notion that they should escape regulation altogether. I cannot, and will not, recommend another last chance saloon for the press. With some measure of regret, therefore, I am driven to conclude that the Government should be ready to consider the need for a statutory backstop regulator being established, to ensure, at the least, that the press are subject to regulation that would require the fullest compliance with the criminal and civil law, if not also to ensure consequences equivalent to those that would flow from an independent self-regulatory system."
2. In the meantime, regardless of whether IMPRESS is recognised by the PRP, the PRP should strongly recommend to Parliament that the key 'guaranteed access to justice incentive' (section 40 of the Crime and Courts Act) should be brought into effect as Parliament had intended.

You are our voice in this please do not fail us.

Thank you,

Marian Anderson
