

Hello

I understand that you are currently consulting the public on what they think about what has happened so far with press regulation since the Leveson Report was published. For myself I am hugely disappointed that the press have been allowed to simply choose not to be a part of any true regulation and that the government would appear to be willing to allow them to continue with a sham self regulation that no one believes is any different from what we have had for decades which has been proven again and again not to work.

Millions and millions of pounds were spent with the Leveson process to rectify what was clearly a failing system and the government committed to implementing it. Lets have the willpower to not allow the press to side step regulation that will ensure that we have a responsible press in the future rather than the irresponsible one that we have all allowed to develop.

Warmest regards

Doug
