

I write to urge the PRP to remind Parliament what the Leveson Report said should happen if the press industry tried to veto the Enquiry's recommendations and refused to comply. The Report says: "If some or all of the industry are not willing to participate in effective independent regulation, my own concluded view is to reject the notion that they should escape regulation altogether. I cannot, and will not, recommend another last chance saloon for the press. With some measure of regret, therefore, I am driven to conclude that the Government should be ready to consider the need for a statutory backstop regulator to be established, to ensure, at the least, that the press are subject to regulation that would require the fullest compliance with the criminal and civil law, if not also to ensure consequences equivalent to those that would flow from an independent self-regulatory system."

I also urge that in the meantime, regardless of whether IMPRESS is recognised by the PRP, the PRP should strongly recommend to Parliament that the key "guaranteed access to justice incentive" (Section 40 of the Crime and Courts Act) should be brought into effect as was Parliament's intention.

Yours faithfully

Ian Leck

(Professor Ian Leck MB ChB PhD DSc FRCP FFPH)