

Dear Sir

It seems to me ridiculous that we should spend so much money on the Leveson Report and then allow the press to ignore his conclusions.

Worse still the Government appear to be in collusion with the press moguls by allowing this to happen.

The whole system of enquiries of this type is in danger of losing public confidence if the Leveson recommendations are not followed.

I therefore recommend:

1. Parliament should be reminded by the PRP what the Leveson Report said should happen if the industry tried to veto his recommendations and refused to comply. The Leveson Report says: "if some or all of the industry are not willing to participate in effective independent regulation, my own concluded view is to reject the notion that they should escape regulation altogether. I cannot, and will not, recommend another last chance saloon for the press. With some measure of regret, therefore, I am driven to conclude that the Government should be ready to consider the need for a statutory backstop regulator being established, to ensure, at the least, that the press are subject to regulation that would require the fullest compliance with the criminal and civil law, if not also to ensure consequences equivalent to those that would flow from an independent self-regulatory system."
2. In the meantime, regardless of whether IMPRESS is recognised by the PRP, the PRP should strongly recommend to Parliament that the key 'guaranteed access to justice incentive' (section 40 of the Crime and Courts Act) should be brought into effect as Parliament had intended.

I hope you will be guided accordingly

Yours sincerely

John Pigott
