

The Leveson report made it clear that if the press would not regulate them selves effectively that a backstop regulator should be appointed to regulate the press and bring them to account if they breach civil or criminal law.

I would suggest that it is way pass the time that this recommendation should be implemented.

In 2013 parliament voted that section 40 of the crime and courts act should be brought into effect and I would suggest that it is way passed the time for that also to be implemented.
