In the headline of an article first published at noon on 27 September 2017, The Canary stated "We need to talk about Laura Kuenssberg. She's listed as a speaker at the Tory Party conference". In fact, as the remainder of the article made clear, Laura Kuenssberg had only been invited to speak at a fringe event. In misrepresenting those facts and in failing to take all reasonable steps to ensure accuracy prior to publication, The Canary breached the IMPRESS Standards Code. An updated version of the article, that was released at 16:50 on 27 September 2017, also breached the Code because it did not correct this significant inaccuracy with due prominence.
